

BYU To Institute Doctoral Program

program for the doctor of philosophy degree will be instituted by Brigham Young University in the fall of 1958, with the first degrees to be granted earlier than 1960, was announced by President Ernest L. Wilkinson.

Until now BYU has granted in its regular academic program the degrees of bachelor of science, master of science, and master of divinity. Doctorates have been awarded to outstanding citizens and scholars at a commencement exercises.

In order to assure sound planning, the Board of Trustees ruled that no doctorates should be given at BYU before 1960. However some students will begin working toward the degree in 1958. Work on the master's degree leading to the Ph.D. degree may be started next autumn quarter.

Areas in which the Ph.D. degree has been authorized at BYU are:

Division of Religion: church history and philosophy, and Bible and modern scripture.

College of Education: educational administration.

College of Humanities and Social Sciences: history.

College of Physical and Engineering Sciences: chemistry and geology.

College of Fine Arts: musicology.

Consideration also will be given to granting of doctorates in human development and family relationships, psychology, and sociology.

BYU has more than 60 departments, most of them now granting the master's degree, Ph.D. programs will be extended to them only as they become ready and qualified, and there is the proper library and demand from students, President Wilkinson said.

As to library, he announced BYU hopes to build a new library building by 1960 which will house a million volumes.

"The doctoral program will be in line with our philosophy of ever greater service to the Church and the nation," President Wilkinson asserted. "As the largest university between Colorado and the Pacific Coast, and the largest church-related university in the nation in terms of full-time students, it is only proper that BYU should join the 158 universities in the nation of offering doctoral degrees."

GOING UP—Steelwork on the new men's residence halls at Brigham Young University stands ready to receive the concrete slab floors which will be attached to the steel lifting collars (foreground) and hoisted into place. The $5,300,000 project is expected to be under roof when students arrive for fall quarter.

Progress Rapid on Men's Residences

Rapid progress is being made on the new men's residence halls at Brigham Young University. The $5,300,000 project of six buildings now under construction north of the stadium.

Excavation work is complete. Steel girders are in place. Concrete roof and floor slabs are being poured at the rate of 400 yards a day and the work should be in place by mid-summer, according to Joyce Wippetts, director of campus planning and development.

In the first application of this technique in this area, all concrete roof and floor slabs will be poured on the ground, attached to lifting collars on the steel girders. After the concrete is cured for 21 days, the floors will then be lifted into place by pneumatic hydraulic jacks and lowered into place. Twelve jacks working simultaneously do the work. The slabs will be poured in place before the lifting begins. The first floor, second floor, and ground floor will be poured. J. L. Tippetts said this type of construction is much faster than conventional building. The first construction activity started on site about April 1, and by September 200,000 square feet of floor space will be under construction. The window walls are being constructed by a firm in Wisconsin and will be shipped by the end of July. They will be bolted into the structure. Designed to accommodate 1170 students, this is the largest single student housing project in the history of Utah and the largest single construction project in BYU history. Contractors are the Oakland Construction Company and the Mark B. Garff, Ryberg, and Garff Construction Company, both of Salt Lake City. The $5,300,000 estimated total cost includes landscaping, furnishings, decorating and utilities as well as the actual construction of the building.

The contract calls for completion during the summer of 1958 to allow the university to prepare for occupancy for the autumn quarter of 1958. The new buildings will be the first permanent housing for men since Allen Hall was constructed in 1938. Temporary buildings which were obtained as military surplus have housed 329 men since 1947.

The project will consist of six buildings—a central building and five dormitory-type residences. Landscaping will provide for extensive sidewalks, planter areas, lawns, shrubbery and patios. Much of the concrete will be in various colors.

BYU Engineers Fire Up Boilers in Mid-July

With the mid-July temperatures hovering in the 90's, engineers fired up the boilers and put the new Brigham Young University heating system into operation.

The tests were made to perfect final adjustments on the new million-dollar system before cool weather arrives. The plant was converted into a high temperature water system from high pressure steam system. It is especially suited to the transmission of heat over long distances from the central plant.

Too often in years past we have been saddened by terrible tragedies involving BYU students. Please take every precaution to make sure the beginning of our new school year will be a happy one. Do not drive long distances without sleep; don't take chances; don't speed; observe all traffic regulations.

We are looking forward to another great year at BYU. Indications are that there will be substantial enrollment gain, and for this excellent and active group an outstanding program of social, cultural and athletic events has been worked out.

BYU Looking Forward To Promising Year; Faculty, Building Expand

Brigham Young University faculty and studentbody leaders are looking forward to another "greatest" year, and judging from enrollment applications, added faculty, and building progress, the prediction is bound to be fulfilled.

From applications in the office of the dean of admissions and records, it appears to be a safe assumption that the studentbody again will show a gain in autumn quarter. Last fall the enrollment was 9025 and represented a 100 per cent increase since 1950.

To avoid handling large crowds, the administration has planned two orientations for freshmen. These will be held August 1, 2, and 3, and September 26, 27, and 28. Registration will be held in the Fieldhouse for two days, Sept. 30, and Oct. 1.

New Faculty Named

To keep pace with the rapidly growing studentbody, the administration this year has appointed more than 75 new faculty members. President Wilkinson said he is trying to keep a favorable ratio of faculty to students so that the University can retain the advantages of personal attention to student instruction and problems.

Construction also is being pushed in an effort to keep up with the rapid BYU expansion. Since 1950 the university has constructed 32 major, permanent buildings at a cost of about 17 million dollars. At present two projects are under way: the $5,300,000 residences for men, and the creation of a village of 150 homes for married students.

When students return for fall quarter, 200,000 square feet of floor space will be under roof on the men's residences. All of the 150 cottages will be in place in the village for married students, and all sidewalks, curbs, gutters, and roads will be constructed. All homes will be painted and landscaping under way.

Heating Plant Ready

With the temperatures hovering in the 90's, engineers this summer fired up the new million-dollar BYU heating plant which will comfortably accommodate the present campus plus new buildings. Also planning has been started for extensive landscaping, beautification of the campus and relocation of walks, streets and parking.

Preparations for student activities already are far advanced, indicating an excellent program. During the summer the Homecoming committee has been active, and planning also has been going on in the Y Day and Junior Prom Committees.

The first big event will be Homecoming, Oct. 21-26, for which the theme "Out of This World" has been chosen.

President's Message Stresses Safety

Dear Students:

As another school year approaches, I am again mindful that thousands of Brigham Young University students will travel long distances to reach the campus for autumn quarter, and again I am concerned for their safety.

Too often in years past we have been saddened by terrible tragedies involving BYU students. Please take every precaution to make sure the beginning of our new school year will be a happy one. Do not drive long distances without sleep; don't take chances; don't speed; observe all traffic regulations.

We are looking forward to another great year at BYU. Indications are that there will be substantial enrollment gain, and for this excellent and active group an outstanding program of social, cultural and athletic events has been worked out.

The campus is being beautified, new housing has been constructed, and renovations and repairs hurried in preparation for your return.

Also we have enlarged the faculty in order to keep pace with the rapidly-growing stu-dentbody. It is our intention to maintain the close relationship of students and faculty even though we have become a large school. In this way BYU students receive all of the advantages of a large university, yet all of the personal attention of the small college.

There is no need for any student to feel lost at BYU. Its social organizations are not exclusive but are open to anyone who chooses to join; there are also dozens of geographical and departmental organizations for those with special interests, and the Brigham Young University Stake, one of the most active in the Church, provides for religious activity and comradeships under most favorable conditions.

We look forward to greeting you; wish you success and happiness in your work, and urge you to join wholeheartedly in the work and activities of this great school.

Sincerely,
Ernest L. Wilkinson

Two Hungarian Students Begin Work at BYU

FIND HAVEN AT BYU—Sporting American clothes, eating American food, and fast learning American speech, these two refugee students from Hungary have started school at Brigham Young University.

Two Hungarian students—refugees from last year's revolution in the Russian satellite country—have arrived at Brigham Young University to attend school on studentbody-donated scholarships.

Peter Polgar, 21, and Elizabeth Katherine Szermi, 23, were chosen in March by missionaries in Vienna to attend BYU on a special fund. Earlier in the year the Daily Universe sponsored a drive for funds to bring two Hungarian students to BYU to pick up the broken threads of their lives following the autumn rebellion in Hungary.

Miss Szermi and Polgar arrived at BYU in July and attended the second session of summer school.

Polgar fought in the Hungarian revolution against the Russian Communists in Budapest last October. In December he attempted to leave his native country but was apprehended at the Austrian border by secret police who sent him back to Budapest. On his second attempt later in the same month he successfully crossed the border into Austria where he lived until coming to BYU.

Miss Szermi was employed in a Budapest travel bureau at the outbreak of the revolution. One of her friends escaped to Austria during the early days of the revolution and then in December, accompanied by another friend, returned to Budapest to aid Miss Szermi in leaving the country. The three companions walked most of the way to the Austrian border, hiding in bushes and ditches from passing Russian tanks. At the border they paid a Russian guard the equivalent of $150 in American money to let them cross the border. Miss Szermi also lived in Vienna, Austria, until coming to BYU.

Miss Szermi will study architecture, and Polgar is majoring in electrical engineering. He was a student at the Technical University of Budapest for two years.

Registrar Lists 6 Spring Term Honor Students

The Registrar's office of Brigham Young University released a list of 219 students who won high honors and 385 who received honors in scholarship during the spring quarter.

A student must make a grade point average of 3.8 to achieve high honors and 3.5 to 3.74 rate for honors. A straight grade is 4 points.

Students on the high honor roll are:

New Students Given Choice Of Orientations

Two sessions of Freshman Orientation will be held at Brigham Young University in preparation for the 1957-58 school year, it was announced by Dr. Wesley P. Lloyd, dean of students.

"Orientation sessions are vital in integrating new students into university life," Dean Lloyd said.

The sessions have been split into two groups, one to be held Aug. 1, 2 and 3, and the other Sept. 26, 27 and 28.

First session is directed mainly at new students living in the vicinity of Brigham Young University, but will be open to any interested freshmen. During the three-day periods freshmen will take personnel tests in English, college ability, interests and aptitudes. Lectures on various BYU procedures will be alternated with the tests.

Housing for first orientation meetings will be handled through the University, and students interested in living in on-campus residence halls should return questionnaire postcards which are being sent out now. Meals will be available at the Smith Cafeteria.

A dance and "sportsaree" will be held at both orientations to enable class members to become better acquainted.

Sessions to be held Sept. 26, 27 and 28 will cover the same material as those in August. These will be followed by sessions for both August and September groups on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. Studentbody orientation will be the objective of these lectures, which will attempt to acquaint new students with student government and organizations.

Freshman registration will be alternated with studentbody orientation. Those students attending orientation September 30 will register on October 1 while groups registering on September 30 will receive orientation October 1.

Hello Week will begin September 30 and coincide with the program of freshman registration and orientation. During this time Inter-organization Council will distribute pamphlets outlining the campus organizations, their purpose, and opportunities for freshmen.

Shuttle service to the campus for students arriving at the Provo train and bus depots will be operated during both sessions, provided by Associated Men Students Council.

Lyceum Series To Present Top Artists

A Lyceum series with some of the top artists in the world for the 1957-58 season has been announced by Herald R. Clark, Brigham Young University Lyceum director and president of the Brigham Young University-Community Concert Association.

This series presents fewer numbers than those of recent years, but most of the artists are the finest in the world. Prof. Clark's consistently successful management of one of the greatest programs in the nation for the size of the community has made Provo and BYU famous throughout the country as a center of culture.

The series will open Nov. 17 with the great Blanche Thebom, sensational Mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Philadelphia Inquirer has called her the "Met's most amazing mezzo" and "America's most voluptuous voice."

On Nov. 18 the ever-popular Utah Symphony Orchestra will appear, and on Nov. 25 Fernando Germani, the Vatican Organist.

Dec. 4 will bring the famous Pauk Quartet, composed of four outstanding European soloists. The ensemble has won top honors in the most important music festivals of the world.

Leonard Warren, named by Newsweek magazine as the "world's finest dramatic baritone," will appear Jan. 30, and on Jan. 27 the series will present Zino Francescatti, French virtuoso violinist recognized as one of the top three in the world.

The famous Concordia Choir will perform at BYU on Feb. 24.

Two pianists are scheduled to wind up the season, Gina Bachauer on April 16 and Gary Graffman on March 6. Miss Bachauer is a dynamic Greek virtuoso who has played to six sold-out national tours of 50 concerts, each. Mr. Graffman has played with the leading orchestras of the nation and has been acclaimed by critics as a true genius.

'57-58 Student Leaders Prepare For Activity-Packed Year

A full slate of Brigham Young University student activities has been planned for the coming school year, according to Webb Crockett, studentbody president.

Freshman orientation will be conducted Aug. 1, 2, 3 and Sept. 26 through 28, followed by registration on Sept. 30-Oct. 1, and Hello Week and Frosh Week, Oct. 1-4.

Freshman class elections are scheduled for Oct. 7-9. An early Homecoming Week, Oct. 21-26 will include such events as the annual Homecoming parade and dance, an assembly, a quartet and trio competition, the annual Fieldhouse Frolics and the traditional lighting of the "Y".

Women will assume the financial responsibility when they ask their favorite dates to the Associated Women Students-sponsored Preference Ball, November 15.

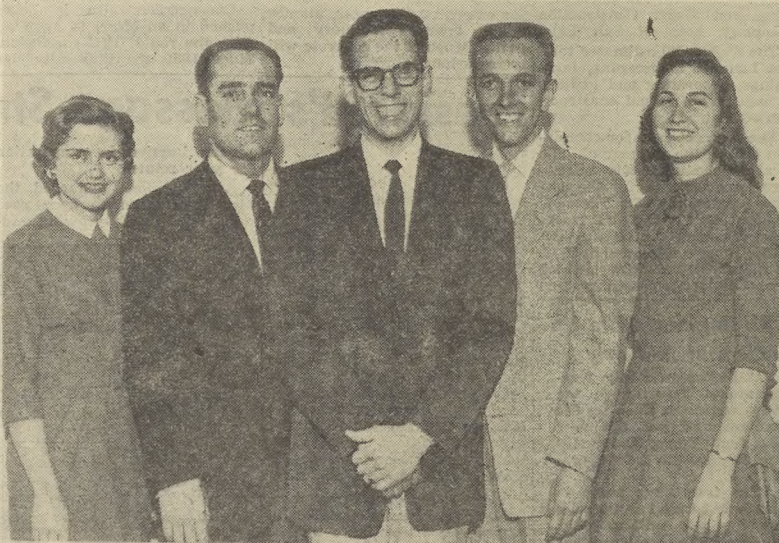

Christmas season will open officially on campus December 4 when the BYU Opera Workshop presents "Amahl and the Night Visitors. The Mistletoe Frolic will be held Dec. 13, with a Christmas concert by the combined BYU musical organizations scheduled for Dec. 11. Final exams December 18-20 will precede the two-week recess for the holidays.

After a January 3 and 4 registration winter sports enthusiasts will look forward to the Snow Carnival Week Jan. 13-18. Skiing and skating and attempting to keep warm will occupy many winter hours for BYU students until spring comes back to Provo and brings with it the studentbody elections on April 14-18 and the Inaugural Ball, April 16.

Winding up the year's activities will be Western Week with its really western cowboys, a rodeo, square dancing and livestock exhibitions.

Commencement is planned for June 6.

YOUR STUDENT OFFICERS—The new Executive Council of Brigham Young University is busy planning student activities for 1957-58, and the group will be on hand, come registration day, to greet what is expected to be a record studentbody. The student officers

Begin Now, Urged Homecoming Week

"Out of This World" has been chosen as the theme for Homecoming Week, October 21 to 27, it was announced by Carl J. chell, student chairman.

Mitchell reminds all organization officers to begin planning immediately for their participation in the events because of early date. Thinking and work is necessary during the summer especially on the quartet and trio competition, parade queen election, and open house said.

Registration Machinery Ready for Big Signup

Procedures already are set up for autumn quarter registration at Brigham Young University, according to Bliss H. Crandall, director of admissions and records. The entire studentbody of more than 9000 will be registered at the George Albert Smith House in two days, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. Students will be registered in strict alphabetical order. Crandall said packets of registration materials will be prepared for all students who graduated last spring quarter or entered school. New students must apply for admission or readmission, preferably 30 days before registration, Dean Crandall said. Students should report to the house five or ten minutes before the time listed in the schedule. Those who report more than ten minutes late must return with the latecomers at 3:30 p.m.

All Operation Scheduled on English System

This fall's freshman class will be the first to enter Brigham Young University under a re-organized program designed to raise the level of English proficiency. The U's Better English Committee, headed by Dr. Samuel Johnson, English Department, indicated the new program last quarter. It includes three steps. A standard examination is given to all freshmen as part of the freshman English course. Students must pass this test with a minimum in order to enter the course. Students passing this standard test might still need freshman English for failure to required work in an acceptable manner. The examination involves mechanics of expression, effectiveness of expression, and reading effective-

Completion of required courses in freshman composition is a prerequisite to a student's application as a junior. Completion is designed to provide for better work in most college classes. No student will be allowed to wait until his junior or senior years to finish freshman English requirements.

The most revolutionary part in the program is the junior efficiency examination, testing students' abilities to write correct effective sentences and paragraphs and to organize their writing into a logical whole. Passing the junior efficiency examination is a prerequisite for graduation.

Students are required to take the exam during the period when they have more than 90 less than 110 quarter hours left. Those who fail the examination will have five quarters before graduation in which they must pass a non-credit remedial course. No one will be graduated from the university without first passing the examination or remedial course.

NEW VILLAGE GROWS—Here is part of the new subdivision of individual houses for married students at BYU. It will be in place and beautified before fall quarter this year.

A Ton of Lawn Seed . . .

Cottages Will Be Ready by Fall

Most of the 150 new homes for married students have been moved into place in the new cottage subdivision north of Brigham Young University campus, and improvement of the area is proceeding rapidly.

The homes have been transported from Mountain Home Air Base, Idaho, a distance of about 450 miles, in convoys of six to a trip. All should be in place by August 8.

Crews are now in process of installing sidewalks, curbs and gutters. Extensions are being built on all of the homes for carports, and all of the homes will be painted inside and outside.

One ton of lawn seed has been purchased by the University for planting this fall and landscaping is expected to be well under way before the student families arrive for fall quarter. Also all streets in the subdivision will be blacktopped and play areas built for children.

Enrollment at BYU has increased 100 per cent since 1950 and the housing project is being rushed to accommodate the ever growing influx of students. Housing for married students has been the most pressing need. About 200 married students and their families are housed in Wy-mout apartments.

The homes are of two types: 100 two-bedroom homes and 50 three-bedroom homes. They are of painted panel construction. None of the buildings is more than three years old, some are practically new, and some never have been lived in. They are equipped with new refrigerators, electric water heaters, best bathroom fixtures and kitchen cabinets. Gas heating is being installed.

BYU Security Chief Reminds Students Of Traffic Rules

Captain Leonard E. Christensen, Brigham Young University security officer, has reminded students that all automobiles driven by students in the vicinity of Provo must be registered with the BYU Traffic Department.

The registration is of great value to the department, and sometimes has helped to locate missing persons and recover lost cars, Capt. Christensen said.

If the car is parked on campus, the University charges $5 per year parking fee. The campus speed limit by state law is 20 miles an hour, and students may park only in designated areas. Grades of violators are withheld until all fines are paid.

By special provision with the State of Utah, out-of-state students may retain their license plates and obtain a windshield sticker by presenting to the State Tax Commission Office in Provo, 102 City and County Building, certification from the Registrar that the student is properly enrolled. However a Utah driver's permit is required within 60 days.

Key Faculty Positions Change; New Appointments Exceed 75

Several changes in key faculty positions have been made for next term at Brigham Young University, and more than 75 new faculty members have been appointed to instruct the fast-growing studentbody.

A new member of the University presidency will be Dr. Earl C. Crockett. He is now chairman of the Department of Social Sciences and assistant to the vice president of Colorado University at Boulder. At commencement exercises in Boulder last spring he was awarded the Robert L. Stearns medal for distinguished service to the university, one of the highest awards that can come to a CU faculty member.

Paul Felt, director of the LDS Institute at College of Southern Utah, has been appointed coordinator of student organizations. He succeeds Dr. Henry L. Isaksen, who has taken a position at Boston University.

Students returning next autumn quarter also will find three new appointees in deans positions.

Dr. Armin J. Hill, of Altadena, Calif., physicist with the Motion Picture Research Council, has been named dean of the College of Physical and Engineering Sciences to succeed Dr. Harvey Fletcher. Dr. Fletcher, at his own request, will return to teaching and research.

Dr. A. Smith Pond, formerly chairman of the Economics Department and dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, will take over as dean of the Graduate School, succeeding Dr. George A. Hansen, who will go on leave of absence.

New dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences is Dr. Leonard W. Rice, formerly chairman of the Department of English.

Departments have received new faculty appointments in the following numbers:

Industrial Arts, 1; Marketing 2; Business Education and Office Management 1; Industrial Management 1; Accounting 2; Economics 2; Laboratory Schools, 8; Instruction 4; Values and Programs 1.

Graduating Seniors Urged to Apply For Credit Checkup

Seniors planning to graduate from Brigham Young University during the next school year are urged to apply for graduation as soon as possible, according to Lucile Spencer, records and registration officer.

Application cards may be picked up at the Registrar's Office, Maeser Building. A fee of $10 will be charged. For seniors planning to graduate in June a late fee will be charged after January 15, 1958.

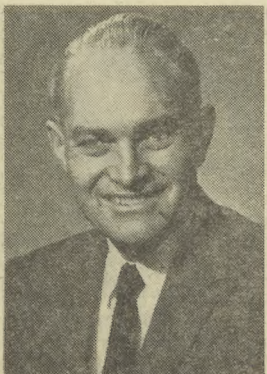

Applying for graduation is necessary in order to receive a degree from the university.

Hang Onto Your Helmets . . .

Arizona, Kansas State Test Cougars in Grid Openers

It's difficult for a football team that has been an almost immovable fixture in the Skyline's second division to deal in anything less than optimistic terms; things have almost got to improve.

But it can be stated, without danger of going overboard, that there is a ray of light breaking through on the BYU football horizon. There is every reason to believe the Cougars—young and green as they are—will improve on last year's record, which saw them move up a step in the conference standings.

Tough Beginning

As might be expected of a green team, the Cougars will have the toughest sledding at the start of the season. They will open against Arizona University at Tucson, and a week later will tangle with Kansas State at Manhattan. Following a debut at home against Montana, the Cougars will hit Utah at Salt Lake City and Wyoming at Laramie.

Although four of the first five games must be classed as back-breakers, Coach Hal Kopp isn't resigned to what appears to be ill fate. He admits the going will be very rough, but he's convinced the Cougars will knock over a few opponents.

The vacancies left through graduation will not pose any particular problem this year, even though the likes of Jay Weenig and others of his calibre will be sorely missed. Coach Kopp will be able to draw on personnel from last fall's undefeated freshman team.

Geared to Air

The Brigham's split-T will be geared to the passing of Quarterback Carroll Johnston, leading passer in the Skyline last year, and running backs like Raynor Pearce, Keith Hubbs, Joe McGinn, Howard Ringwood, R. K. Brown and Steve Campt.

Depth should be good in nearly every position.

Robison Named 'Coach of Year'

Another BYU athletic coach was singled out for post-season honors recently when Clarence Robison, the Cougars' slender, soft-spoken track coach, was named "Spring Sports Coach of the Year" for the Rocky Mountain region by a national magazine.

The magazine, Coach & Athlete, selected Robison as top coach in the Intermountain area for his efforts in guiding the Cougars to their third consecutive track crown.

Listed with Top Men

Robison, who came to BYU as head coach in 1949, was listed with such outstanding mentors as Bill Easton of Kansas, Joe Bedenk of Penn State, and Clyde Littlefield of Texas.

The fact the Brigham spike team went undefeated in 1957 competition was a surprise to no one. Robison's boys haven't lost a dual meet in Skyline competition in over four years, and the point totals in Western Division and Skyline meets have sometimes been greater than the

'Y' Upgrading Hinted in '57

If last year's results in the field of sports can be used as a barometer of things to come, Brigham Young University's athletic teams should reap an even greater harvest in intercollegiate competition during the 1957-58 school year.

At least that the consensus of most critics and fans who follow the Cougars in sports around the calendar year.

Here is a brief look at the major sports:

FOOTBALL—Coach Hal Kopp and staff will welcome back 21 lettermen from the '56 squad, plus about 23 numeral winners up from last year's undefeated freshman team. Hal admits his club will be green, but figures the Cougars will start rolling smoothly the latter part of the season.

While last year's frosh squad has been classed as one of the better first-year teams seen at BYU, the coaching staff is just as vocal about the frosh recruits the Cougars hope to have in uniform this fall.

Look for some outstanding young ball players among the newcomers.

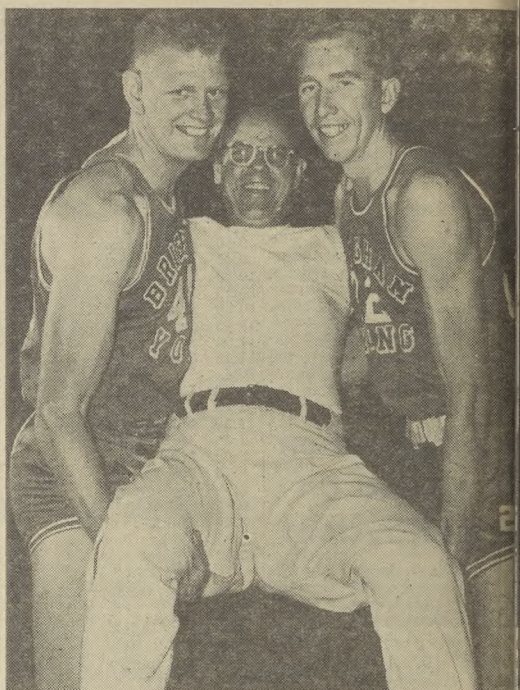

BASKETBALL—Every year is a big year for basketball at BYU, and 1957-58 is no exception. Coach Stan Watts, whose five captured the Skyline title last year against what appeared to be overwhelming odds, will be hard pressed for veteran players, true. But Stan never fails to develop a representative team.

Although the club, as it now appears, will not have a senior on its roster, the Cougars will be strengthened by several promising stars up from 1957's undefeated freshman team.

Logically, this is a building year. But Stan is opportunistic enough to capitalize on every break.

TRACK—The Cougars' engulfing grasp of Skyline track and field records should continue. Here again, an abundant supply of touted newcomers plus a host of returning letter-winners, will swell the tide. No relief in sight for Y's track and field opponents.

Baseball, wrestling, golf and tennis teams are also expected to improve.

HANDLE WITH CARE—Caught in midst of hardwood horse-play is Stan Watts, basketball coach at BYU, shown getting the old heave-ho from cage giants Russ Jones and Keith Pedersen. Both Jones and Pedersen are 6-5½ members of 1956-57 club. Watts powered the Cats to Skyline championship last season, but will be losing four of starting five. Help is expected from freshmen, who were undefeated last year.

Cougars Arrange Trip South As Part of Hoop Schedule

A plan to meet some of the stronger basketball teams in the South was announced recently along with the Cougar's 1957-58 basketball schedule.

In seasons past the Brigham have journeyed east to play major college teams in tournaments such as the Holiday Festival, Dixie Classic and Motor City tournaments. But this coming season the Cougars will chart a junket through the Deep South, meeting four reputable southern schools on the road.

The 26-game schedule for 1957-58 was announced by Dr. Milton F. Hartvigsen, dean of the College of Recreation, Health and Physical Education, and Athletics.

This winter the Wattsmen will play Washington, Iowa State, Portland University, University of Oregon, Tennessee, Alabama, Vanderbilt, Loyola (New Orleans), Montana State, and seven Skyline opponents.

The Cougars will open season Dec. 6-7 with two games against the University of Washington at Seattle. Coach Stan Watts' crew will then return to Provo for home stands against Iowa State, Portland University and Oregon University.

Heading south after Christmas, the Cats will stop first at Knoxville, Tenn., to play Tennessee, one of the best offensive teams in the nation last year. BYU will then meet University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, Vanderbilt at Nashville, and Loyola at New Orleans.

New Montana Foe

Besides the usual two games each with seven Skyline opponents, the Cougars will also play two games with Montana State one tilt at Bozeman and a second in Provo.

Missing from Watts' 1957 Skyline championship team will be such regulars as Tom Stein, John Benson, Lynn Rowe and Harry Anderson; four of the starting five.

The Cougars will beef up squad with some newcomers up from the frosh ranks. They include Lavoy Eaton, Jack Sawyer, Don Helm, Lynn Gleason and others who sparked the Kittens to an undefeated season.

Marching Band Readies Shows

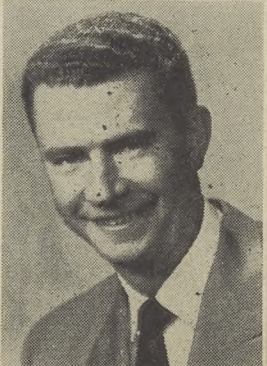

Preparations already are under way for the football half-time shows to be presented by the BYU Cougar Marching Band of 120 members under direction of Dick Ballou.

Consistently a crowd-pleaser, the band recently was chosen one of the top ten in the nation.

For the past three years the solo majorette position has been held by the national junior twirling champion, Val Crosley. The drum major position for 1957 will be held jointly by Mills Crenshaw, Napa Calif., and John McKellar, Tooele.

Five shows are being planned for the coming season. The band will make two trips, one probably to California.

Membership in the band is open to all qualified BYU students.
